The 2000 Election PIKEVILLE COLLEGE DECIDES

Communication students Bambi Lucas, Laura Ford, and Melanie Cable went to Danville, Ky, for the vice-presidential debate on Oct. 5, 2000. Centre College hosted the national event.

The group was led by Robert Leweke, assistant professor of communication, who organized the trip for students in his political communication course. The three said they learned a lot and will never forget the experience. Laura Ford was interviewed by a reporter shortly before leaving.

The students were extremely interested in seeing the many secret service agents, and they loaded up with buttons and other election memorabilia.

The experience was valuable for the three students who were interested in seeing political communication in action.

Top: Bambi, Laura, and Melanie are eager to attend the vice-presidential debate.

Above: Students at Pikeville College showed their patriotism by getting involved with Election 2000. Bonnie Potter is conducting an election survey that her political communication class organized.

Right: SGA sponsored a mock election to determine who PC students supported.

The 2000 Election AMERICA DECIDES

Left: Police held back protestors in Danville from the area where people could watch the vice-presidential debate via two large screens.

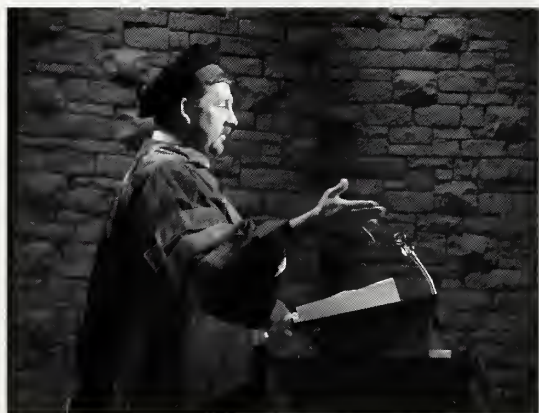

Above: The peaceful protestors in Danville were carefully monitored by the police. They received plenty of attention from the media and those who attended.

Left: Student protestors from other colleges and universities protested at the vice-presidential debate in Danville because third party candidates were not allowed to participate in the debates.

PIKEVILLE COLLEGE FILM SOCIETY

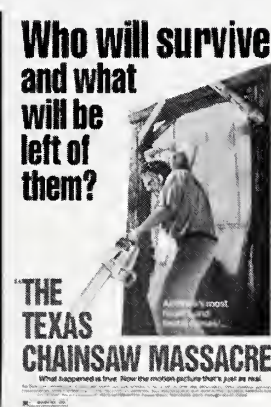

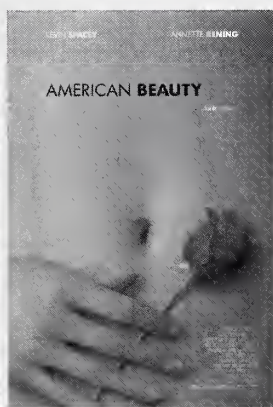

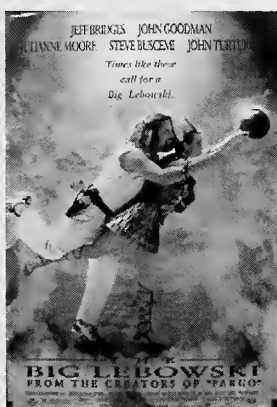

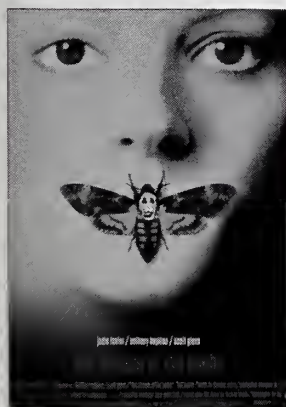

PC Film Society founders, Wes Ray, Tom Perry, and Darrell Rife pose after completing a free campus showing of "The Texas Chainsaw Massacre."

In the Spring of 2001, the Pikeville College Film Society was formed under the sponsorship of Daniel Schnopp-Wyatt. The club was formed to study classic and significant cinema and to showcase films free to PC students who might have otherwise not gotten a chance to see them. These showings were held inside the Cut-ThruCafe with great success to energetic PC film fans. In the near future, the PC Film Society plans to participate in short-film contests and even produce a documentary. The PC Film Society, coming soon to a theater near you!

These films were screened free for students and faculty in the Cut-Thru Cafe during the Spring 2001 semester.
